

Life with Our Father

the better life of knowing God

Introduction

Your better life is waiting.

Look there in the garden where night blanketed a lone man bent in desperate prayer. Tears streamed to his hands stained by agony's blood. He knew his time had come, time to die for his friends, for us, for his Father.

And yet he did not weep in fear of death. Not this man. He wept rather of the impending brief separation that he knew was coming. He knew he must go, but the thought of being away from his friends was nearly more than his human frame could bear, and so he asked, "Father..., if there is another way..., please..., " knowing full well that there was not.

And then the night was over. The day had come with his horrifying final task at hand. He knew what was coming; the humiliation, the executioner's hammer, the flesh-tearing pain, the slow death, and the bitter taste of countless sins not of his own doing. And he saw your face, my face, and the face of his Father.

Indeed our destiny hung in the balance, but it was his Father who he sought to please. And his Father's pleasure was you and I. Thousands of years had passed, dozens of generations, since the Father walked in the garden with his children. The Father wanted his babies back. And he was about to get them. Jesus was going to the Cross.
